The Government of Canada has introduced a variety of measures to help individual Canadians and businesses facing hardship as a result of COVID-19. Here's a summary of some of the many relief measures that may be available to you.

Canada Emergency Response Benefit (CERB)

If you have lost your job, are working reduced hours due to the COVID-19 pandemic, or are sick, quarantined or forced to stay home to care for children or other relatives, the Canada Emergency Response Benefit<sup>1</sup> ("CERB") provides income support of $500 per week (or $2,000 per four-week eligibility period) for up to 28 weeks<sup>2</sup>, with a maximum claim of $14,000.

The CERB is available if you are a worker who has lost your job, or are still employed but either are not being paid because of disruptions to your workplace or, in some cases, have had your working hours reduced. It is also available if you are sick, quarantined, or taking care of someone who is sick with COVID-19. If you are a working parent who must stay home without pay to care for children, either because children are sick or are at home due to school and daycare closures, you are also eligible for the CERB. It does not, however, apply if you are a worker who has voluntarily quit your job.

To be eligible for the CERB, you must be at least 15 years old, reside in Canada and have a Social Insurance Number. You must also have had a minimum of $5,000 of (self-)employment income or maternity or parental benefits under the Employment Insurance ("EI") program<sup>3</sup> in either 2019 or in the 12 months prior to your date of application. In the initial four-week claim period, you cannot have earned more than $1,000 of income from (self-)employment for at least 14 consecutive days. For claims in subsequent periods, you cannot have earned more than $1,000 during the four-week benefit period of that claim. You may also be eligible for the CERB if you have been eligible for EI benefits.

You can apply for the CERB for any four-week period between March 15, 2020 and September 26, 2020. The four-week periods do not need to be consecutive but you can only receive benefits for a total of 28 weeks. You must apply separately for each four-week period and the last date to apply for the benefit (retroactively) is December 2, 2020.

<sup>1</sup> Service Canada and the Employment Insurance program is available online at canada.ca/en/employment-social-development/corporate/portfolio/service-canada.html.

<sup>2</sup> In June the CERB was extended for an additional eight weeks, and in August, for an additional four weeks, for a total of 28 weeks of eligibility and a maximum claim of $14,000.

The CERB is administered by the Canada Revenue Agency ("CRA") and you can apply online through either Service Canada and the Employment Insurance program<sup>4</sup>, or through the CRA using the CRA My Account<sup>5</sup> system – but not both. If you were a full-time employee (i.e. someone who worked 30 hours or more per week) for at least four months in 2019 or a part-time employee for at least eight months in 2019, you should apply through Service Canada; otherwise, you should apply through the CRA My Account system. You can also apply over the telephone using an automated phone service.<sup>6</sup>

To help manage the volume of applications, the government has designated specific days of the week for you to apply for the CERB, depending on your month of birth.<sup>7</sup>

The CERB is linked to the EI benefit system so that you cannot be paid both EI benefits and the CERB for the same period.

If you were eligible to receive EI benefits before March 15, 2020, you will continue to receive those benefits until the end of your benefit period. If those benefits end before October 3, 2020, you may then apply for the CERB so long as you are eligible at that time.

If you became eligible for EI on March 15th or later, your claim will automatically be processed through the CERB even if you originally applied for EI, and even if you started to receive EI. If your EI entitlement exceeds the CERB benefit, you retain your eligibility to receive EI after you stop receiving the CERB and your EI entitlement won't be impacted. You can still access regular EI if you continue to be unemployed after the 16-week period of receiving the CERB.

The government will issue a T4A tax slip for 2020 showing the total amount of CERB you received, and you must report this amount as income when filing your 2020 income tax return. No tax will be deducted at source from your CERB payments. The amount of tax that you will owe on your CERB will depend on your 2020 marginal tax rate, so you may need to pay tax on the CERB amounts you received when you file your 2020 income tax return.

If you receive a CERB payment to which you are not entitled, you will need to either return the payment or make a repayment. This could happen if you applied for the CERB twice through both the CRA and Service Canada. You could also be required to repay the CERB if you discover you are not eligible after receiving benefits. For instance, you may be rehired, possibly because your employer is participating in the Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy Program.<sup>8</sup> For your first eligibility period, you will need to return or repay the CERB if you earned (or will earn) more than $1,000 from (self-) employment income within a 14-day interval during the initial 4-week period. For subsequent periods, you will need to return or make a repayment if you earned (or will earn) more than $1,000 at any time during that 4-week period.<sup>9</sup>

As of August 19, 2020, over 8.6 million people have applied for CERB benefits, with over $69.3 billion in CERB benefits paid out.<sup>10</sup>

Simplified EI Program

EI “regular benefits”<sup>11</sup> are generally 55% of your average insurable weekly earnings in the qualifying period,<sup>12</sup> with a maximum benefit of $573 per week.<sup>13</sup>

The unemployment rate in your region is used to determine the number of:

- Hours of insurable employment you need in the qualifying period (normally ranging from 420 hours in regions with high unemployment, to 700 hours in regions with low unemployment).
- “Best weeks of earnings” used to calculate your benefits (normally ranging from 14 weeks in regions with high unemployment, to 22 weeks in regions with low unemployment).
- Weeks of EI benefits that you can claim (normally ranging from 14 weeks in regions with low unemployment, to 45 weeks in regions with high unemployment).

As of September 27, 2020, new EI claimants:

- Only need 120 hours of insurable employment in the qualifying period<sup>14</sup>;
- Would use their best 14 weeks of earnings to calculate EI regular benefits, with a minimum weekly benefit amount of $400 (regardless of the best weeks of earnings); and
- Can claim EI regular benefits for at least 26 weeks.

These temporary measures are based on an unemployment rate of 13.1%. This means that if you're in a region with an unemployment rate of less than 13.1%, you would likely receive temporary EI regular benefits that are higher, and last longer, than the EI regular benefits that you would otherwise receive. If you are in a region with an unemployment rate that is higher than 13.1%, you would likely continue to be eligible for EI benefits that are higher, and last longer, than the temporary EI regular benefits.

The government also announced that, under the temporary measures, EI maternity and parental benefits, and EI fishing benefits would be increased. Also, EI premium rates will be frozen for two years (at 1.58% of insurable earnings for employees and 2.21% of insurable earnings for employers).<sup>15</sup>

If you are currently receiving CERB benefit through Service Canada, you will be transitioned to the EI program once maximum CERB benefits have been received, so long as you are eligible for EI and require the income support. However, if you are receiving CERB through the CRA, you will need to apply for EI through Service Canada after September 26th.

Example

Kareem usually works about 900 hours in seasonal employment annually but, as a result of the pandemic, he is laid off and has only accumulated 200 hours of work in the qualifying period. Even though Kareem does not have the 420 hours normally required to qualify for EI regular benefits, as a result of the temporary measures he has more than the minimum 120 hours of work and can qualify for at least 26 weeks of EI regular benefits at a minimum amount of $400 a week.

<sup>11</sup> In this Report, EI regular benefits refers to the basic EI program, as distinguished from EI maternity and paternal benefits, and EI fishing benefits.

<sup>12</sup> The qualifying period is the last 52 weeks, or since your last claim, whichever is shorter.

<sup>13</sup> The maximum yearly insurable earnings is $54,200 in 2020, so the maximum benefit is $573 per week, calculated as $54,200 divided by 52 times 55%.

<sup>14</sup> This is calculated as 420 hours minus a one-time credit of 300 hours.

<sup>15</sup> For more information, see Supporting Canadians Through the Next Phase of the Economy Re-opening: Increased Access to EI and Recovery Benefits, which is available online at canada.ca/en/employment-social-development/news/2020/08/supporting-canadians-through-the-next-phase-of-the-economy-re-opening-increased-access-to-ei-and-recovery-benefits.html.

Canada Recovery Benefit (CRB)

With the CERB set to expire, if you are not eligible for EI, you may be able to qualify for the new Canada Recovery Benefit ("CRB.") This benefit was designed to include those who are self-employed and those working in the so-called "gig economy." The CRB, which is scheduled to run from September 27, 2020 for one year, will provide a taxable benefit amount of $400 per week, for up to 26 weeks.

The benefit will be available if you are a Canadian resident who is at least 15 years old and have a valid SIN, have stopped working due to COVID-19 and are available and looking for work, or are working, but have experienced a reduction in your (self-)employment income for reasons related to COVID-19. Similar to the CERB requirements, you must not be eligible for EI, must not have quit your job voluntarily, and must have had (self-)employment income of at least $5,000 in 2019 or 2020.

You are required to apply after every two-week period for which you need support and must attest that you continue to meet the above requirements. In order to continue to be eligible for the benefit, you would need to look for -- and accept -- work, assuming it's reasonable to do so.

Unlike the CERB, which put an income limitation of $1,000 on the amount that you could earn in a four-week period without losing the entire CERB, to encourage CRB recipients to work, you would be able to earn income from (self-)employment while receiving the benefit, as long as you continue to meet the other requirements; however, to ensure that the benefit targets those who need it most, you would need to repay some (or all) of the benefit through your income tax return if your annual net income (excluding the CRB itself) is over $38,000. Specifically, you would need to repay $0.50 of the CRB for each dollar of your annual net income that is above $38,000 in the calendar year, up to the amount of CRB you received.

Example

Sarah is a self-employed bookkeeper who earned $34,000 in 2019 but her business has slowed due to COVID-19. She applied for the CERB, but her benefits will run out in September. She is now only working at 40% capacity. With the CRB, she could receive $400 per week for up to 26 weeks. If her annual net income in a calendar year is above $38,000 (excluding the CRB payments), she would need to repay some (or all) of the benefit when she files her income tax return for that year.

Canada Recovery Sickness Benefit (CRSB)

If you are (self-)employed and don't have a paid sick leave program, the new Canada Recovery Sickness Benefit ("CRSB") will provide a $500 per week taxable benefit, for up to two weeks, if you cannot work either because you are ill, or because you must self-isolate, due to COVID-19. This benefit will be available for one year, also starting September 27, 2020.

In order to be eligible for the CRSB, you must be resident in Canada with a valid SIN, be at least 15 years old, be (self-)employed when the application is made, have missed a minimum of 60% of scheduled work in the particular week, not be otherwise receiving paid sick leave, and have earned at least $5,000 of (self-)employment income in 2019 or 2020.

You will be required to attest that you meet the requirements for the CRSB, although medical certificates are not required. Applications can be made after the specific claim week ends.

Example

Jesse is cashier in a hospital pharmacy, and earns approximately $35,000 per year. He has continued to work throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. Jesse must self-isolate for 14 days beginning October 1, 2020, as one of his family members tested positive for COVID-19. So long as Jesse is not provided paid sick leave from his employer, he will be eligible to receive $500 per week, for up to two weeks, under the CRSB.

Canada Recovery Caregiving Benefit (CRCB)

The Canada Recovery Caregiving Benefit (CRCB) will provide a $500 per week taxable benefit, for up to 26 weeks, if you miss work to care for a family member in certain circumstances due to COVID-19. This benefit will also be available for one year, beginning on September 27, 2020. The CRCB can be shared among household members, but only one household member can receive the benefit in any one week. If a facility is available, but you prefer to keep a dependent at home, you're not eligible for the CRCB.

To qualify for the CRCB, you must also be a Canadian resident at least 15 years of age with a valid SIN. In addition, you must have been unable to work for at least 60% of your normally scheduled work week because you must take care of a child who is under 12 years old, or provide care to a family member with a disability or a dependent. You must be caring for the child, family member or dependent because either their school, daycare, day program or care facility is closed (or operates under an alternative schedule) because of COVID-19, a medical professional has advised that they cannot attend the facility due to being at high risk if they contract COVID-19, or because the caregiver usually providing care is not available because of COVID-19. In addition, you must not have received paid leave or certain other benefits (including the CERB, CRB, CRSB, short term disability benefits, workers' compensation benefits, or EI benefits) for that work week.

Similar to the CRSB, applications can be made after the particular claim period ends, and you must attest that the requirements have been met.

Example

Carl is a single parent with an 8 year old child earning $48,000 annually. His child's school closed for four weeks starting November 1, 2020 due COVID-19. Carl would be eligible to receive $500 per week, for a total of $2,000 for the four week period that his child's school is closed.

Special Goods and Services Tax Credit (GSTC) payment

If you were eligible for the Goods and Services Tax Credit ("GSTC") for the 2019-20 benefit year, in April 2020 you should have received a one-time special Goods and Services Tax Credit ("GSTC") payment, doubling your GSTC amount. The government has estimated an average boost to income for those benefitting from this measure will be approximately $400 for single individuals and nearly $600 for couples. This is estimated to benefit over 12 million low- and modest-income Canadian families.

Increased Canada Child Benefit (CCB) payments

If you were eligible for the Canada Child Benefit ("CCB") for the 2019-20 benefit year, your May 2020 payment was increased by $300 per child. The government estimates that the average increase for families receiving the CCB is approximately $550 on average and that over 3.5 million families with children benefited.

Students

If you are a post-secondary school student, or recent high school graduate, the government has announced a number of measures that may be available to you. Further information on the measures for students may be found in our report, "Post-secondary education budgeting in the era of COVID-19."<sup>16</sup>

Canada Emergency Student Benefit (CESB)

You may be eligible for the Canada Emergency Student Benefit ("CESB") if you are a current post-secondary student, if you graduated in December 2019 or later, or if you have completed (or will complete) high school in

2020 and have applied for a post-secondary educational program that begins before February 1, 2021. If you receive payments from either the CERB or EI, you are not eligible for the CESB.

The CESB provides $1,250 for each four-week period in which you earned no more than $1,000 from (self-) employment. If you are living with a disability, or care for another person, you will be eligible to receive a higher amount of $2,000 per four-week period. If you are able to work, you must be actively looking for work in order to be eligible for this benefit. The first four-week period ran from May 10 to June 6, 2020, and the last period ends on August 29, 2020.

If you completed high school after June 7, 2020, you are only permitted to apply for two eligibility periods, starting with the July 5 to August 1, 2020 eligibility period.

You can apply online for the CESB, using the CRA My Account and you must submit your application no later than September 30, 2020. You're only permitted to apply for one eligibility period at a time, and if you remain eligible, you will be required to re-apply for the next four week period. Application dates for subsequent periods will be staggered, so the weekday on which you should apply depends on your month of birth.<sup>17</sup>

CESB payments will be administered through the CRA. Amounts you receive are taxable and you must report these amounts as income when filing your 2020 income tax return. To this end, the government will issue a T4A tax slip indicating the total amount of CESB paid to you. The amount of tax that you owe on the CESB will depend on your 2020 marginal tax rate, so you may need to pay tax on the CERB amounts you received when you file their 2020 income tax return.

If you received a CESB payment to which you were not entitled, you will need to either return the payment or make a repayment. This could happen, for instance, if you apply for the CESB and then find work and earn more than $1,000 during that period.<sup>18</sup>

As of July 23, 2020, nearly 665,000 people have applied for CESB benefits, with over $2 billion in CESB benefits paid out.<sup>19</sup>

Student and Apprentice Loans

If you are currently in the process of repaying your Canada Student Loans and Apprentice Loans, during the period beginning March 30, 2020 and ending on September 30, 2020, you will not need to make any repayments and no interest will be added to your loan.

For the 2020-2021 school year, the government will increase the maximum monthly amount that you may receive under these loan programs to $350 per month, up from $210.

Canada Summer Jobs Program

The Canada Summer Jobs program helps create summer jobs for those ages 15 to 30 years old. If you are an employer in this program, you can receive a wage subsidy of up to 100% (up from 50%) of the provincial or territorial minimum hourly wage for your eligible employees. This will apply to staff that you hire on either a full-time or part-time basis. Job placements can begin on May 11, 2020 and the program will be extended to placements running until February 28, 2021.

If you would like to find a job through this program, you can search through the Job Bank website.<sup>20</sup> For students applying for the CESB, the CRA has indicated that registering with the Job Bank is an easy way to demonstrate that you are looking for work.

<sup>17</sup> Details about eligibility for the CESB and the application process can be found online at: canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/benefits/emergency-student-benefit.html.

<sup>19</sup> See Canada Emergency Student Benefit statistics at canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/benefits/emergency-student-benefit/cesb-statistics.html.

<sup>20</sup> The Job Bank website can be accessed online at jobbank.gc.ca/home.

Student Grants

If you are a student who volunteers in positions that assist communities during the COVID-19 pandemic, you may be eligible for the new Canada Student Service Grant. This grant was to provide amounts ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 (depending on the number of hours you spent volunteering) that you can use towards your education in the fall of 2020.

As of August 21, the program has not yet been launched and the government is “currently considering options for the (program). As such, applications for service opportunities and students are not currently being processed or accepted.”<sup>21</sup>

In addition, the existing Canada Student Grants program will be doubled, so you may receive up to $6,000 if you are a full-time student or up to $3,000 if you are a part-time student.

Seniors

One-time OAS pension and GIS payments

If you are at least 65 years of age and meet certain requirements, you may receive benefits under the Old Age Security (OAS) program. If you were eligible for an OAS pension in June 2020, you should have received a one-time additional payment of $300. You were eligible if you had applied for benefits or had been automatically enrolled at age 65. If you are a low-income senior who is eligible for the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS), you should have received an additional $200. These one-time payments are tax-free, and you need not apply for them. They were issued during the week of July 6, 2020.

Eligibility for the GIS and other income-tested government benefits depends on the income you reported on your previous year's tax return.<sup>22</sup> Since the 2019 tax filing deadline was extended to June 1, 2020, the government may not have been able to determine eligibility for the GIS for the upcoming 2020-2021 benefit year (which began on July 1, 2020) if you had not yet have filed your 2019 tax return. The government has stated that GIS payments will continue to be made even if your 2019 tax return has not yet been assessed. This will be a temporary measure and the government encourages you to file your 2019 tax return as soon as possible, even though filing deadlines have been extended, as discussed in the section called "Tax payment and filing deadlines" below.

RRIF minimum amounts

There is no minimum annual withdrawal required from your Registered Retirement Savings Plan (“RRSP”). By the end of the year you reach 71, you must either convert your RRSP to a Registered Retirement Income Fund (“RRIF”) to continue the tax deferral, de-register the RRSP and pay the resulting taxes, or purchase a registered annuity.

You must start taking minimum withdrawals from your RRIF in the year after the RRIF is established. Minimum withdrawals are calculated as a percentage of the fair market value of your RRIF assets at the beginning of the year, and the percentage is based on your age. Withdrawals from your RRSP or RRIF are taxable.

The government announced that for 2020, it has reduced required minimum withdrawals from RRIFs by 25% “in recognition of volatile market conditions and their impact on many seniors’ retirement savings.” This will provide needed flexibility if you are concerned that you may be required to liquidate more of your RRIF assets than you need to meet the current legislated minimum withdrawal requirements. Further information on the changes to RRIF minimum amounts may be found in our report, "Lower RRIF minimum withdrawals for 2020: Canada's COVID-19 response plan."<sup>23</sup>

<sup>22</sup> If you have a spouse or common-law partner, eligibility for the GIS depends on the income that both of you reported on your previous year's tax returns.

Individuals with disabilities

If you either have a Disability Tax Credit (DTC) certificate provided by the CRA, are receiving either Canada Pension Plan or Quebec Pension Plan disability benefits, or Veterans Affairs Canada disability support, you will automatically receive $600 to help you deal with the extra expenses you may be facing during the COVID-19 pandemic. No application or attestation is needed. If you are eligible for the Disability Tax Credit, but have not yet applied, you must do so by September 25, 2020 to receive the payment.

The one-time payment to persons with disabilities is non-taxable and will be coordinated with the one-time OAS pension and GIS payments, which are discussed above, such that the total of one-time payments for seniors with a disability is limited to $600.

Specifically, if you are eligible for the one-time payment to persons with disabilities but are not eligible for an OAS pension, you will receive a one-time, non-taxable payment of $600. If you are primarily responsible for the care and upbringing of a child under the age of 18 for the purposes of the CCB, and the child is eligible for the DTC, you will receive the $600 on behalf of the child.<sup>24</sup>

Seniors eligible for this payment as well as an OAS pension but not the GIS, will receive a payment of $300, in addition to the special COVID-19 one-time OAS pension payment of $300, for a combined total of $600.

Lower-income seniors eligible for this payment as well as an OAS pension and the GIS, will receive a payment of $100, in addition to the special COVID-19 one-time OAS pension payment ($300) and GIS payment ($200), also for a combined total of $600.

Tax payment and filing deadlines

The government announced extensions of the deadlines for filing personal and trust tax returns and paying balances owing.

Individuals

The deadline to file your personal 2019 T1 Income Tax and Benefit Return was extended to June 1, 2020. If you are self-employed, you and your spouse or common-law partner still had until June 15, 2020 to file your tax returns. In July 2020, however, the CRA clarified that so long as you pay any balance owing for your 2019 tax return by September 30, 2020, you will not be assessed any penalties or arrears interest.

If you expect to receive income-tested benefits, such as the GSTC or the CCB, the government has indicated that benefits will continue to be paid for the third quarter of 2020, which ends on September 30, 2020; however, it is recommended that you still file your tax return as soon as possible to help ensure any credits or benefits are properly processed. If your 2019 personal tax return is not received and assessed by CRA by early September 2020, the estimated benefits and/or credits will stop in October 2020, and you will have to repay amounts received starting in July 2020.

Under the tax rules, quarterly tax instalments (due March 16, June 15, Sept. 15 and Dec. 15) are required for 2020 if your "net tax owing" this year will be more than $3,000 ($1,800 for Quebec tax filers) and was also greater than $3,000 in either 2019 or 2018. The definition of net tax owing is effectively your net federal and provincial taxes, less income tax withheld at source. If you are self-employed, your instalments must include any Canada Pension Plan ("CPP") contributions and voluntary EI premiums.

You now have until September 30, 2020 to pay your June 2020 quarterly personal tax instalments, and other instalments that would normally be due between March 18 and September 30, 2020. No interest or penalties will accumulate on these amounts during this period.

Trusts

The government extended the deadline to file T3 Trust Income Tax Returns, along with T3 Information Slips, to May 1, 2020 for trusts with taxation years ending on December 31, 2019. This included personal trusts and many mutual fund and other trusts that report investment income on T3 slips. For trusts with year-ends other than December 31, and who would have had a filing due date in April or May, the tax filing deadline was extended to June 1, 2020, and for trusts with a filing due date in June, July or August, the deadline is now September 1, 2020. As above, no penalties or interest will be applied if returns are filed and any payments made by September 30, 2020.

In addition, for trusts that have income tax instalments due on or after March 18, 2020 and before September 30, 2020, the payment deadline is deferred to September 30, 2020.

Business owners

The government also announced a variety of measures to support your business and further information on these initiatives can be found in our report, "Relief measures for businesses: Canada's COVID-19 response plan."<sup>25</sup>
